

africa TODAY

Africa Today publishes peer-reviewed, scholarly articles and book reviews in a broad range of academic disciplines on topics related to contemporary Africa. We seek to be a venue for interdisciplinary approaches, diverse perspectives, and original research in the humanities and social sciences. This includes work on social, cultural, political, historical, and economic subjects. Past special issues have been on topics such as the future of African artistic practices, the socio-cultural life of bus stations in Africa, and family-based health care in Ghana. ANNOUNCING A NEW BOOK SERIES

Women and Gender in Africa

Jacqueline-Bethel Mougoué and Aili Mari Tripp
(University of Wisconsin—Madison, USA), Editors

Women and Gender in Africa seeks to publish innovative book-length works, based in original research, primarily in the areas of history, politics, and cultural studies. We welcome submissions that address questions and debates of broad theoretical, empirical, and methodological significance of interest to a wide readership. We encourage submissions that demonstrate the comparative implications of women's experiences across and beyond the African continent.

We are especially interested in such topics as women and religion, sexuality, LGBTQI+ concerns, human rights, migration, health, the family, the environment, law, conflict resolution, race and ethnicity, women's movements and feminism, and globalization. Projects addressing agency are particularly welcome, including authority, political and spiritual leadership, economic activity, and forms of knowledge and healing. We encourage manuscripts that incorporate discussions of literature and popular culture, representation and identity construction, and testimony and life writing.

For information about submission, please contact Senior Acquisitions Assistant Jacqueline Krass at krass@wisc.edu. For other queries, please contact the series editors, Jacqueline-Bethel Mougoué (jmougoue@wisc.edu) and Aili Mari Tripp (atripp@wisc.edu).
